Deforestation in Rondônia, Brazil This map shows the extent of deforestation in Rondônia, Brazil, and the area that would be at risk of deforestation if a proposed road were built. About 35 percent of the area within 55 km of existing roads is deforested. Assuming a similar rate of deforestation, the proposed road would lead to about 023 sq. km of new deforestation. Data sources: Brazilian Institute of Geography and Statistics, Brazilian Official reads Official reads Cities Powered road Population (2014) An aka Area User: End, Deptitionia, Str. The Refullance Copyrighton. One 150,000 An acro Economical Cities Source: US - 150,000 Regulation State Source: US - 150,000 Source: Station in Rondônia, Brazil, and the area that would be at risk of deforested Assuming a similar rate of deforestation in Rondonia Proposed road were built. About 35 percent of the area what has been accounted by a similar rate of deforestation, the proposed road were built and the area what has been accounted by a similar rate of deforestation, the proposed road were built about 5 km of new deforested. Assuming a similar rate of deforestation, the proposed road were built about 5 km of new deforested. Assuming a similar rate of deforestation, the proposed road were built and the area what has been accounted by a similar rate of deforestation, the proposed road were built and the area what has been accounted by a similar rate of deforestation, the proposed road were built and the area what has been accounted by a similar rate of deforestation, the proposed road were built and the accounted by a similar rate of deforestation and the accounted by a similar rate of deforestation and the accounted by a similar rate of deforestation and the accounted by a similar rate of deforestation and the accounted by a similar rate of deforestation and the accounted by a similar rate of deforestation and the accounted by a similar rate of deforestation and the accounted by a similar rate of deforestation and the accounted by a similar rate of